Sion. See Ion.

Some. (AS. sum, Goth sama, like the same) A termination of certain adjectives. It indicates a considerable degree of the thing on quantity; as, mettlesome, full of mettle or spirit; gladsome, very glad or joyous.

Ster. (AS.—estre,—istre) A termination denoting skill or occupation. It was originally applied to denote the female agent in an action. Thus, songster signified, at first, a female who sings; but the ending ster having at length, in a measure, lost its peculiar force, the feminine termination ess was appended to it; thus, songster became songsteress, or songstress with a double ending.

T. Th. (AS ) A termination of abstract nouns of Anglo-Saxon origin, Tion. See Ion.

Tude. (L.-tudo) A termination of abstract nouns from the Latin, signifying action or an active faculty, being, or a state of being.

Ty. (L.—tas,—tatis, F.—te.) A termination of words denoting action or an active faculty, being, or a state of being, viewed abstractly.

Ure. (L.—ura) A termination of words derived from the Latin (often through the Italian or French), and denoting action or an active faculty, being or a state of being, viewed abstractly.

Ward, or Wards. (AS.—weard.—weardes; Goth.—vairths, allied to L. vertere, to turn, versus, toward) A suffix used in the composition of a large class of words, and denoting direction, or tendency to, motion toward, and the like.

Wise. (AS. wise, allied to guise) A termination of adverbs or conjunctions implying in the direction of, by way of, or in the manner of.
